To brave the new frontier – African-Americans in space

By Lt. Col. Gus Schalkham
Director, HQ ARPC
Public Affairs

Many children want to be an astronaut. It's been a dream for many African-American children – a dream for progress shared by Dr. Martin Luther King. This vision has now become reality for 14 African-Americans.

These pioneers have provided the pathway for generations to come. They are astronauts who hail from all across our great land and have risen to become great role models.

Air Force (retired) Col. Guion Buford was the first African-American to fly in space.

A native of Philadelphia, Penn., he earned a doctorate in aerospace engineering.

He was a decorated pilot who flew over 144 missions in Vietnam and was selected to be an astronaut in 1979. Colonel Buford flew four separate missions aboard shuttles Challenger and Discovery.

He was 41 on his first flight in 1983. His final trip in space was nine years later.

Dr. Bernard Harris was the first African-American to walk in space. Born in 1956 in Temple, Texas, his academic success led to his becoming a medical doctor.

He was selected by NASA to become an astronaut in 1990. Dr. Harris flew two missions in space. His walk in space took place on Feb. 9, 1995.

This same mission was the first flight of the new joint Russian-American Space Program, including a rendezvous with the Russian Space Station Mir.

“To be the first is great, it really was, but to me it signified there will be many more after me,” he said.

Ms. Mae Jemison was the first

African-American woman to fly in space. She was born in Decatur, Ala. in 1956, but she considers Chicago, Ill. her home.

An academic whiz kid, she entered Stanford University at the age of 16 and went on to earn her doctorate in medicine from Cornell in 1981.

She flew one space flight in 1992, which was a joint effort with Japan to conduct 44 experiments, including bone cell research.

Air Force Col. (retired) Frederick Gregory was the first to be a space commander aboard Discovery in November 1989, and pilot in 1985 on board Challenger.

Born in 1941 in our nation's capital, Washington, D.C., he graduated from the Air Force Academy and entered the astronaut program in 1978 where he flew three missions.

His last flight was on Atlantis in 1991. Colonel Gregory is now the number two man in NASA, serving as deputy administrator.

Unfortunately, risk comes with success, as three African-American space adventurers made the ultimate sacrifice.

The first was Mr. Robert Lawrence, who died during a 1967 jet training accident. Though he never got the chance to fly into space, he is considered the first African-American astronaut to die in the line of duty.

Astronaut Ronald McNair was the second African-American to perish during a space mission. He was aboard Challenger in Jan 1986 when it was lost.

And now, Air Force Lt. Col. Michael Anderson, mission specialist on Columbia has joined them in the stars.

It's all about taking that giant leap.

Q: I just wanted to address my concern for the guards at the bus stop close to Bldg. 444. In the summer it is very hot and in the winter, it is very cold. There is no place to warm up or cool off like the guards at the main entrance. Is there any way that the bus stop could be enclosed to provide some kind of shelter for them and the employees?

A: Thanks for your concern. Currently, the guards are only posted at the bus stop when buses are scheduled to arrive. Otherwise, they have access to a shel-

However, we are in the process of changing security procedures at the Buckley Annex and guards will no longer check the buses at the bus stop. We are also looking for funds to install a bus shelter to improve the quality of life for our DoD employees and contractors who use this service.

Thanks again for bringing this to our attention.

Buckley to instate juvenile misconduct board

By Airman 1st Class Chris Smith
460th Public Affairs

It's not uncommon for juvenile military dependants to get caught breaking laws on base. Generally, they'd be turned over to local authorities for legal action.

Soon, another form of justice will be possible here at Buckley Air Force Base.

A juvenile misconduct board will be available March 1 for law-breaking dependants who must face consequences for their offenses but don't want to face action in civilian juvenile courts.

The process for the misconduct board will begin with the juvenile control officer, a security forces member ranked at staff sergeant or higher, designated by the 460th Air Base Wing commander, according to Capt. India Nicholson, assistant judge advocate for the Base Legal Office. Once informed of an offense committed by a juvenile dependant, a report of investigation will be started.

"The 460th Security Forces Squadron will complete a report of investigation. In this report of investigation, the security forces commander will make recommendations for a disposition and forward the recommendation to the 460th Air Base Wing Staff Judge Advocate, 460th Mission Support Group commander and deputy, wing commander and vice commander.

If the wing commander sees fit, he will then inform the 460 MSG commander or deputy to convene the juvenile misconduct board, which will be comprised of six members, according to Captain Nicholson. The members will include the wing commander, 460 SFS commander, 460th Medical Squadron commander, an officer from the legal office, Military Equal Opportunity and a member of the first sergeants group.

"When the board convenes, it is closed to the public," said Captain Nicholson. "No information is kept as record."

The juvenile facing action attends with his or her parent, guardian and/or military sponsor. The juvenile can even bring witnesses to help speak in his or her behalf.

"During the board, nobody is under oath. It's a very informal atmosphere," she said.

After the offending juvenile presents his or her case, if in order, there are several forms of punishment that might be given. Some of the possible punishments include verbal counseling, written reprimand, restriction from areas of base, referral to life skills and in extreme circumstances, being barred from base, according to Captain Nicholson.

Captain Nicholson referred to one situation at a previous base where a juvenile misconduct board was convened to decide on a consequence for two juveniles. The two juveniles had gotten hold of a fork lift on base and rammed it into some cars. They were barred from the base and their parents were held liable for the damage.

Capt. India Nicholson, Base Legal Office assistant judge advocate, and Lt. Col. Floyd Russell, 460th Air Base Wing Staff Judge Advocate, look through Colorado juvenile laws in the legal office. The legal office will need to be familiar with juvenile laws before the beginning of the juvenile misconduct board in March.

On the bright side, they didn't have to face consequences in a juvenile court, with the possibility of spending time in a juvenile detention facility. They learned their lesson without severe penalties they could have received in the civilian sector.

According to Col. Allen Kirkman Jr., 460th Air Base Wing commander, the new juvenile misconduct board could make law enforcement at Buckley better and help young offenders here learn their lesson without the lasting effects a civilian court can bring.

"Buckley's juvenile misconduct board will enhance our law enforcement initiatives and aide any military juvenile who has been identified with the lack of law-abiding integrity," said the commander. "Adhering to counsel from a board of appointed members from Buckley, rather than just paying a fine through civilian juvenile courts, might have a more lasting effect and dissuade juveniles from making bad decisions in the future."

Black History Month Celebration

The Buckley Multi-Cultural Committee is co-sponsoring an African-American History Ceremony with the Coors African-American Association. The event is scheduled for Saturday at the Wings Over the Rockies museum at 6 p.m. Brig. Gen. Toreaser A. Steele, vice commander of HQ AAFES, will be giving the POW/MIA address. The event is free and open to the public.

General Steele was commissioned through the Air Force ROTC program at Tennessee State University and began her career as a personnel officer. She has served at the major command and Air Force headquarters levels. General Steele has commanded at the squadron, group and wing levels. Prior to assuming her current position, General Steele was Director of Personnel Resources, and Director of the Air Force Personnel Operations Agency with the Office of the Deputy Chief of Staff for Personnel, Headquarters U.S. Air Force, Washington, D.C., where she was responsible for developing and coordinating military end strength, civilian work year, competition and skills management strategies.

For more information about the celebration, contact Ms. Jasmin Malboeuf at 303-677-6929 or Tech. Sgt. Anna Johnson at 303-677-6808.

Air Force ready for 2005 Base Realignment and Closure survey

By Staff Sgt. C. Todd Lopez
Air Force Print News

WASHINGTON -- The Department of Defense published in the Federal Register on Feb. 12 the criteria that will be used in selecting installations for the 2005 round of base realignment and closure.

Air Force Director of Installations, Environment and Logistics Nelson F. Gibbs spoke that same morning to the House Appropriations Committee subcommittee on military construction about the state of the Air Force's BRAC program.

"Air Force professionals at all levels have made great progress to prepare for BRAC 2005," Mr. Gibbs told the committee in his prepared testimony.

That preparation, Mr. Gibbs said, involved the creation of an Air Force office for basing and infrastructure analysis to act as the focal point for Air Force BRAC 2005 efforts. The major commands followed suit, creating their own offices to support the process, he said.

"Today, there are (more than) 150 full and part-time Air Force professionals engaged in preparing for BRAC 2005," Mr. Gibbs said.

Lessons learned from previous rounds of BRAC will help the Air Force better deal with property that may be affected by the BRAC 2005 round, Mr. Gibbs said.

"The Air Force has made significant progress in transitioning the installations identified for closure or realignment in previous rounds of BRAC," he said. "Turning to BRAC's past, the Air Force continues to work with local reuse authorities and other property recipients at each realigned and closed base from the four previous rounds of BRAC to transfer property."

Most importantly, Mr. Gibbs said, the Air Force will be better prepared through the BRAC

2005 process to deed property faster than in previous BRAC rounds.

The Air Force is currently in the process of disposing of more than 87,000 acres at 32 locations, Mr. Gibbs said.

He also told committee members that despite what may be said on the Internet, referring to a fake story that has been circulating for some weeks, no decisions have been made as to what bases will be closed or realigned.

"No one can know the department of the Air Force's basing structure requirements for the 21st century until the BRAC 2005 process is finished," Mr. Gibbs said. "(Air Force officials affirm) ... that regardless of what may have been published on the World Wide Web, there is no Air Force BRAC list."

Gibbs said the final list of base closure recommendations will not be available until after May 2005.

Blotter Entries

POV vs. POV

Location: Parking Lot of Bldg. 429

The law enforcement desk was notified of a minor vehicle accident in the parking lot of Bldg. 429. One patrol was dispatched. The operator of vehicle one was driving in one of the parking lot rows when vehicle two was backing out and hit the driver side bumper. The operator of vehicle two reported that vehicle one stopped so he could back out. As vehicle two was backing up, he turned to look and did not see vehicle one. No damage estimate was given on either vehicle. Security forces cited vehicle one and had both vehicle operators complete a minor vehicle accident worksheet.

POV vs. POV

Location: Intersection of Vail Street and Devils Thumb Avenue

A security forces member notified the law enforcement desk of a minor vehicle accident at the intersection of Vail Street and Devils Thumb Avenue. The operator of vehicle one rolled through the stop sign and turned left. The operator of vehicle two did not see vehicle one before he also turned. The two vehicles collided in the intersection. A minor vehicle accident worksheet was completed by both drivers.

Damage to Private Property

Location: Bldg. 28, Dormitory Parking Lot

A military member notified the law enforcement desk that his car had been vandalized. He noticed that the cover on his front bumper was missing. Further investigation revealed that a bottle of lemonade had been poured on the vehicle and the molding on the driver’s-side rear wheel had been ripped off. The owner of the vehicle estimated the damage to be under $200. Security forces obtained a statement from the vehicle owner and took pictures of the damage. The incident is pending further investigation.

Unlocked Facility

Location: Bldg. 1301, Naval Reserve Center

While conducting a check of Bldg. 1301, Naval Reserve Center, two security forces members found a door on the south west side of the building unsecure with no signs of forced entry. Three patrols were dispatched. Security forces established a cordon and completed a walk around of the facility with no further discrepancies found.

Emergency Response

Location: Bldg. 1, Base Exchange

The fire department notified the law enforcement desk that an ambulance responded to Bldg. 1 for a civilian who had passed out. One patrol was dispatched. The victim was treated on-scene by emergency personnel and transported to a local medical facility.

Put Your Two Cents In: Help Name Buckley’s New Housing Community

The 460th Air Base Wing is now accepting nomination forms from Buckley personnel for the naming of the new housing community that is currently in the planning phase.

1. Invitations to enter names for the new housing community at Buckley are available through the Mile High Guardian and the Housing Management Office (HMO).

2. You may submit your own name or choose a name from the below listed names.

3. Please submit your nomination with names from historic individuals or events, historic Air Force themes, geographic resource, (e.g. flowers, trees, mountains or peaks), ecological resource, ski resorts, etc.

4. Nominations will be accepted through February. The top five nominated names will be entered into the final phase of the selection process. The 460th Air Base Wing commander and his staff will make the final selection.

The following are just some of the suggested names for the new community

Hobbies: Extreme sports, football and just hanging out.

How do your day-to-day duties contribute to mission success?

I support the warfighters by ensuring their travel and military pay is taken care of.

If you could change one thing about the Air Force what would it be?

The overall attitude. We as airmen should feel that the Air Force views us as potential leaders and should make us feel privileged to serve. Not the other way around, meaning the Air Force owes me something because I am serving.

What has been your most memorable experience in the Air Force?

Getting on the bus and looking back at the grounds of basic military training at Lackland Air Force Base, Texas. That was the defining moment for me as I transitioned from an average citizen to serving in the most powerful Air Force in the world.

Duties, responsibilities, and accomplishments:

My duties include, first and foremost, to be an airman in the Air Force. Secondly, to provide valuable financial customer service to all personnel. My responsibilities include being a certifying officer for all travel and military pay documents to ensure informa-
